MEFE Scandal Response

Parker, Colorado, April 29. As I am sure you all know, my press secretary, Finch, has been accused of DUI on his way home from a fundraiser hosted by mothers against drunk driving. His BAC was found to be 0.09; however, it has also been found that many breathalyzers are not as accurate as they are thought to be. Because of this, it is hard to know whether my press secretary's BAC was actually 0.09. Thankfully, no one was hurt during this event. Finch was pulled over and safely taken to his destination. I can happily report that Finch is a Mormon who has never had any alcohol before. He has expressed his love for God and that he would never willingly go against Him. Fortunately, Erica, my President, was also at this fundraiser and has reported to have seeing Conor Voorhies add something to Finch's drink. We have been looking into the situation and will continue looking; however, it is believed that Conor Voorhies did in fact spike Finch's drink. Since Finch has never had alcohol before, he did not know that it was spiked with alcohol. The drink was also one that he had never had before and was very flavorful. Given that Conor is the press secretary of another campaign, it does make sense for him to set something up against my press secretary. Conor was also found to have been trying to injure someone in his own press conference and did not take the back lash well. In conclusion, although Finch was DUI, his drink was spiked, and it was out of his control. No one was hurt and the breathalyzer used to check his BAC could have been inaccurate.
